What is Access Control?

Access Control is a system that enables an authority or business to control access to certain areas of a building. Access Control is an absolute necessity for most businesses nowadays, in order to prevent theft but also for health and safety reasons.

Why is Access Control important?

Controlling access into and around your building is not only good for security, but also for health and safety reasons, with users being granted or denied access to certain zones at different times.

Access Control is vitally important in business, as there is usually a lot of foot traffic. With this in mind, if anything were to be stolen then it would be really difficult to pinpoint who was there, perhaps when they weren't supposed to be. Most businesses like to have a way for new visitors or clients to sign in and out of their premises, not only for security reasons, but also peace of mind.

Above everything, access control is very important for theft and safety reasons.
